From reports on the origin of the fire it would seem that some restrictions should be placed on the building of shacks in districts outside of city building regulations.

This destructive fire was start ed by the burning of a shack in the hills near Montrose which was built in a very flimsy manner, in fact part of the sides be ing nothing but paper.

A house built as this one was and located with dry brush on all sides without any chance to combat a fire is far more dangerous to the cities built on the surrounding hillsides than the same house would be in the city within easy reach of fire protection.

HE county authorities should arrange to place restrictions on the building of houses in wooded territory in the county, which are liable to prove fire traps. The cities surrounding the hills should insist on such action, for all the protection possible to provide cities would not give protection to any great extent against a

The sound of crackling flames caused Mr. Williams to abandon his meditations. He looked up to observe his whole home ablaze. Frantically he dashed into the cabin and made an effort to remove an ornamental wall bed, which was its one piece of expensive furniture. Fire at his back singed his hair and he was obliged to rush from his cabin empty handed.

The next thought of Mr. Williams was for his Ford roadster, which he keeps shined up and in which he takes great pride. This was housed in its garage adjoining the east side of the cabin. THE $10,000 MAN

A writer recently mentioned with evident contempt, as a typical failure, a man whom he described as "one of those $10,000 fellows." The reader was asked to infer that the citizen able to command no standard standa touched success.

Standards are changing, or the writer in question must so regard them. There are comparatively few who attain to the $10,000 plane. The ordinary citizen falls far below it, but not to disgrace, and not to a point where an author possessings brains, even while measuring success by financial achievement, would have the brazen assurance to stamp him a Judges on the federal bench, chosen for their probity and professional standing, receive $6000 as salary. If circuit judges, they get an additional $1000. They occupy positions that a high class of lawyers would be glad to accept. Members of congress are paid $7500. In many, probably in a majority of instances, this represents a larger income than they had received in private life. Doubtless there is some poor material in congress, the law of averages making this inevitable, but no individual there was selected because a failure, and none is a failure because selected and thus associated with a stipend of less than $10,000.

Only a short time ago there was a call for the $10,000 man. Great employers were in quest of him. The readiness to pay him this salary was indicative of belief that he was high grade, far superior to the ordinary unit of his class. Now comes a smart author to put the $10,000 man among the failures.

It is not too much to say that the author has proved nothing but the outstanding fact that he is a snob.

PARASITES

So, naturalists observe, a flea Has smaller fleas that on him prey; And these have smaller still to bite 'em, And so proceed ad infinitum.

Thus the humerous Swift wrote long ago. Matters do not seem to have changed much since. Society has its parasites, these being afflicted in turn. There is the bootlegger, now. Consider him for an instant. He defies the law laid down for his restraint, and deals in illicit liquor. This would be bad enough had cultivated bad surgeons.

HUNTING OUT OF SEASON

Several ranchers of the Malibu country are under arrest on the charge of hunting deer out of season. They deny the offense, albeit the deer heads found in their backyards mutely testify to the contrary. A deer sheds its horns by process of nature, but when it sheds its head, there has been some contributing concern that is known for the rapidity with which daughter of Dr. Blakeley, of

Army and navy officers both protest against the proposed change. It may be taken for granted that they, more than any other class, understand what would be the effect of consolidating. Each type takes natural and proper pride in the department in which his duties are performed. Each feels that by merging army and navy authority both elements would be losers, as though something had been taken from their dignity and importance.

The President is commarder-in-chief of the army and navy. This places the disposition of both with him; so after all, the two have a single executive head, the secretaries being subordinate, and subject without question to orders from the President.

There is between the respective arms of defense a healthful and stimulating rivalry. It is this that makes their annual football game of interest. In the service of their country, this rivalry is forgotten and their efforts are co-ordinated in the most satisfactory fashion. In this respect their usefulness could not be enlarged by saving even the respectable sum of

The Inside and the Outside

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

Our Puritan ancestors thought it wicked to be beautiful and wanton to wish to be comfortable. That is not slander but historic fact: if you doubt it review your history. The result of this warped psychology is that the world is still full of women who desire to look well but consider efforts to make themselves pleasing to the eye as a form of immorality.

They would rather be ugly and moral than handsome and frivolous. Perhaps because they can't see themselves and can always avenge themselves on their more favored sisters by insinuating that they are fixing up "to attract the men"—which of course they are, and should.

Which brings me to a subject just now occupying the center of the controversial stage, facial surgery. I've just read a hortatory article by a woman who desires for some reason to discourage it. The burden of her song was that any woman who has submitted her wrinkles to surgical correction is thereafter unable to assume natural facial expressions and that, because of this, and the lack of animation resulting, such a woman found that her family soon grew to hate the unwrinkled face—and mother had a sad heart in consequence.

Let's agree off hand that a wrinkled face is preferable to a heavy heart. The trouble is that the first too often produces, or is a factor in, the second. But that is neither here nor there; the thing we are considering at this point is the sad little fact that the writer of that highly moral article knew little about facial surgery or else she

CHAPTER III

Trinidad, October 1.
Trinidad is a city of about twelve thousand people, lying six thousand feet high, and flanked all about by the Sangre de Cristo mountains. It is at the foot of Raton pass, crossed by the Santa Fe and by all motorists who come this way across the trail to reach California.

The pass reaches up some eight thousand feet into the air, and from its summit there is a marvelous view of the great high plain of New Mexico. On one side of the city rises Fisher's Peak, about twelve thousand feet high with a queer top like the wall of an old castle.

As I stepped from the train the air was soft and balmy and the weather beautifully clear and I congratulated myself upon the arrival of Indian summer and three weeks perhaps of the ideal crisp bright weather I had experienced about here two years ago. Thus congratulating myself I went to bed for the second section of a night's

When I awoke the air was filled with suspicious looking clouds that gathered more densely and in the afternoon at the coal camp at Morley, half way up toward Raton pass, the storm broke and such rain fell as I have seldom seen. The air was a gray sheet of water that fell torrentially.

Water rushed and roared down the side of the mountain gorge straddled by the camp, and at the bottom the mountain creek became a raging and frothing torrent of muddy yellow water in a brief ten minutes.

We had gathered the school children of the camp into the auditorium and there between flashes of lightning and roars of thunder and to the accompaniment of driving sheets of rain on the roof and against the windows there was singing by the youngsters of the schools, a reading of verses, telling of stories and the acting of a tiny play by tots of Mexican parentage. There was no alarm on the part of the youngsters because of the fury of the storm. since all of them are well used to the mountain thunder storms and torrential rains.

Interesting school children these are. We visited a primary room with forty children, only three of American parentage. Mexicans predominated among the others, with a dash of Italian, Austrian, Greek, Slav, Spanish, and I know not how many others.

The discipline was free and easy. Yet at all times the teacher had entire control. At a word there was quiet. Two little Mexican girls stood before her, as she revealed cards one by one, with names of familiar things lettered on them. As the card was revealed the youngsters darted at madcap speed to the thing named-table, chair, desk, victrola, door, as the case might be.

Whoever reached the thing named first got the card. After the cards had all been revealed they counted up and the one with the most cards won. Thus teaching went on through the eye to the brain and legs and arms.

They were taught to read, understand and act by sentences printed on the board. Thus the teacher set down the sentence: "Tommy open the door." Tommy's little face screwed up and wrinkled and puzzled it out and then he flew to the door and opened it. Only a little while ago Tommy knew not a word of English to speak, to say nothing of reading. Now Tommy reads and knows what it all means, and how to translate his reading into

There is complete co-ordination of effort and interest between school authorities and the Colorado Fuel and Iron company with respect to all school matters.

The schools draw their attendance entirely from the families of employes of the company. And the company realizes the value and necessity for the education and Americanization, not only of the children but the parents.

So not infrequently the company under-takes to build necessary school houses at the cost of material and labor, buying necessary things through its own immense purchasing agencies. Their engineers make plans and assist in every way. Their social and educational service renders aid in getting teachers who will do the best work in these out of the way coal mines and camps.

Boys and girls are urged to go from the grades to the high schools. In one of camps recently forty children finished eight grade and the same forty went on to junior high school. Not one dropped out. This among children of foreign parentage.

The value of education is coming to be realized not only by the children, but by the parents. And the training had by the children in domestic science and like things is working a desirable result in the foreign homes -bringing them to American manners and ways and finally language.

that's the trouble, you have.

There's been a funeral in this whole spiritual furniture, house, and none of us knew it. Our baby's dead. And the worst of it is, she is not buried, so that we can go and visit her grave and weep. She has just disappeared, rather, she has been transformed, and we have a strange young woman living

'Well, I don't like it," said the mother. "She's not only not under our authority any more, but she exhibits a curious sort of antagonism to I'm sure I can't understand why. She knows we love her and are her best friends. She even flatly contradicted you today at the dinner table. And she told you you didn't know enough about art to have a correct opinion about something or other we were discussing.'

'That was funny, wasn't it?" laughed the doctor. "It didn't strike me as being so very funny," went on his wife. "It rather shocked me. It even struck me as being a little vulgar. People don't say that sort of thing to strangers, let alone par-

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

Recently a Los Angeles woman was killed in a spectacular automobile accident. The driver alleged to be at fault has been arrested, charged with manslaughter, and the allegation is made that he was drunk at the time of the killing.

It is not uncommon for an automobile to kill one or more persons. It is, indeed, not uncommon for the assertion to be heard that the man at the wheel was under the influence of liquor. But there is no frequency as to penalizing such offenders; far from it. On the contrary, to so such as arrest them seems to represent little but wasted energy.

The statutes of California say that for one while intoxicated to drive an automobile, is a felony. In order to constitute the act a felony, he does not need to slay anybody, or bump anybody with the machine; all he has to do is to be drunk and drive. Perhaps the courts know why this law is ignored

Senator Brookhart of Iowa seems to have played a sort of joke on his friends. Going about the country spreading the news that lowa farmers are balanced precariously on the brink of pauperism, which is not the case, he has made some people believe it.

One of the warm supporters of Brookhart is the editor of a farm aper. When he sought his usual quota of advertisements in the east ne met with small success. The dealers said that there could be no utility in advertising in a region where everybody was insolvent. For the editor to explain that the senator had been telling whoppers nust have been a delicate task. When an American dollar, worth sixty cents or so, is sufficient to purchase three billion German marks, it may be said that the latter represents below zero in value.

The worthlessness of the mark, considered in relation to the fact that Germany purchases much copper and cotton, paying for these commodities in real money, makes the financial situation over there a deeper puzzle. It is impossible to suppress the suspicion hat the mark went flooey as the result of sinister design.

When a speeder paid $250 fine rather than serve three days in jail, an observing reporter remarked that he must have regarded his time as very valuable; which may not have been the idea at all. There is a general prejudice against being in jail.

An account of the digging up of the bones of Cro-Magnon men interesting, but when it reaches a certain point, becomes peculiar.

runs this way:

This doesn't seem right somehow, but of course the layman is not supposed to know much about paleontology.

"Miles" Standish is the form to which Americans are accustomed. It was good enough for Longfellow, and ought to be good enough for the average citizen. The movie folk have elected That is permissible, but they can't make it stick.

There was a well known burglar in fiction whose name often appears as "Sykes." Dickens created him and called him "Sikes." The general verdict is in favor of Dickens. And Longfellow was a literary authority, too.

They have a voodoo doctor in jail at Pittsburgh. Perhaps the negro exedus from the south is responsible. This doctor was so devoted to his calling that he killed a woman who had declined to accept his potion for the cure of love troubles.

Present prospects are that the ranks of the voodoo profession are to lose one unit by the rope route. A young woman, after an unsuccessful try at suicide, said that she would rather die than face the world a drug addict. If she really feels this way about it, the suggestion that she quit taking drugs is thrown in for what it is worth. A lawyer is one of two under indictment for a swindling opera-tion said to have taken $130,000 from poor people. He admits raving retainer $60,000 of this as his legal fee. Isn't that a pretty stiff price for telling innocent folk how to throw away their money?

OUR CHILDREN

A child, especially an adolescent child, ought to keep in training nost of the time he is in school. Not the training of the physical echication department, but the character training department where he is the sole authority.

No one can take his power to train his spirit, educate his will. No one can add to it but himself. Seldom does he get a sharply pointed suggestion that he feels to be timely and acceptable and wise. Seldom does he get one so forceful as to make him feel that he ought to go in training on it.

"I'm eating too much sugar. My face is all pimples and the doctor says I will have that trouble until I stop, but why live if I can't have sweets? My goodness, think of meals without dessert! Impossible!" Now of course most of that is just froth. No child likes to have his face disfigured, but no child likes to give up sweets either.

He needs a little bolstering up; a little prodding. You wait until the froth has floated by and then you say with just a dash of acidity. "You really don't want a pimply face do you? You aren't interested in having your chin look like a gobbler's wattles, are you?"

If he has ever seen a turkey gobbler's wattles, he'll sputter some: if he hasn't, he will later. You wait until he subsides again and you put in. "Why don't you go into training for those pimples? Strengthen your will power a bit? Rather soft, aren't you, to be crying for a nip of sugar? Put a pound of it in front of you and keep it there for a month without touching it. You'll feel like a prince instead of a mewling baby!" The same thing goes for the girl. "I simply can't pass a piece of chocolate. I can't keep from biting my nails and I'm simply spoiling my fingers. I have to chew them, I'm so nervous! Or hitching my right shoulder, or giggling when anyone looks at me. I'm simply terrible, but I can't help it!"

The mother got out her Of course she can help it and of course he can. They have handkerchief and wiped off a to go into training, and that's the last thing they wish to do and tear that had started down the last thing that we have the courage to insist they do.

Discipline of self is so hard. We love our tender little selves probably true," she answered, so much that we have a decided aversion to anything that even so much as bruises them. Hence our foolish weakness toward the "That," said the doctor, as children who should go into training and "simply can't."

What is the good of our precepts and maxims? What is the use of the lists and the tables if, when they have all been taught and drilled and learned, the child who is to use them stands helpless before a box of sugar? Or a bow of ribbon? Or an easy chair?

Get into training and set the example for the children. Other-

Little Billee had never felt so excited, so exhilarated by such a show before, nor so full of eager anticipation. He looked at his programme, and saw that the Hungarian band (the first that had yet appeared in western Europe, I be lieve) would play an overture of gypsy dances. Then Madame Svengali would sing "un air connu, sans accompagnement," and after wards other airs, including the "Nussbaum" of Schumann (for the first time in Paris, it seemed). Then a rest of ten minutes; then more csardas; then the diva would sing "Malbrouck s'en va-t'en guerre," of all things in the world! and finish up with "un impromptu de Chopin, sans paroles."

Truly a somewhat incongruous bill of fare!

Housekeeping Aboard Ship Made Easy Through Use of Mechanical Devices

Scrubbing Decks By Machine

There have been many devices invented to aid the housewife in keeping her home spick and span. There have also been just as many designed within the last few years which enable sailormen to keep the ships upon which they are working in an exceptionally clean condition. The days when the sailors apent the greater part of their time on watch scrubbing down decks by hand are gone, on ocean liners at least. What the vacuum cleaner is to the modern housewife, so are various staterooms, dining saloous, and the machines used on board ships to the social halls of the vessels.

saving devices which make it possible to keep them in a very cleanly state. One of the most interesting pieces of apparatus used in this connection is a scrubbing machine. With this device one man can scrub all the outer decks on a liner, whether it be one of the smaller vessels in the London service, or the bigger America or the George Washington in the Bremen service, in the time that it would obding it take

These machines, electrically driven consist of a rotating round brush of heavy bristles driven by an electric motor and mounted on a heav iron base on wheels. The deck of the liner is sanded by one of the men on watch is sanded by one of the men on watch and another man with the machine of the stewards of this big fleet. Not which is controled from a long handle follows after him, the brush scouring the sand over the hard wood deck When all the dirt ground into the deck is loosened a third man follows up with a hear flushing down the deck with a hose, flushing down the decks leaving them in a whitened condition which would please even the most crit-

Persons who have seen United States

Persons who have seen United States liners at their Hoboken piers, or in their berths abroad, after the ship has been loaded or unloaded, and noticed the dirty and untidy condition of the decks, are astonished an hour or so later at seeing the decks spotiess after the men and their mechanical cleaners have been on the job.

There is a tendency in some quarters to decry the use of these mechanical devices on board ship, on the grounds that sailormen no longer be necessarily of the cave-man type, as they had to be when all deck scrubbing was done by hand at the cost of considerable elbow grease. Skippers and their officers, however, find that these machines keep ship decks exceptionally the angeling the sailors extra time for one which has built up a reputation for the line of a very enviable character.

U. S. C. Mangles Sagebrush Footballers in Battle

After playing two games of more or less indifferent football, the U. S. C. Trojans Saturday came GALFURNA AND through and put up a real demonstration of the gridiron sport, de-feating Nevada 33 to 0 at the Los Angeles coliseum. The Trojan team looked like a whirlwind once it got started, and gave every indication that the University of Washington will have a tough job next Saturday.

It seems that "Gloomy Gus" Henderson tried to beat the Wolves with his second string men, but he was unable to turn the trick. Swede Anderson was the only regular in the outfit. Things began to look rather bad for the Trojan Goofs, so Gus called them out and put the first string men in the line-up. From then on there never was any doubt as to the outcome. be embarrassing the British government considerably in its opposition to the American proposals to establish a 12-mile territorial waters limit. The Irish soldier of forture has openly avowed his intention to promote a trans-Atlantic rum-running enterprise in case the roadsters, tourings and sedans 12-mile limit is established. The anchoring of a British ship outside the 12-mile limit for the purpose of selling liquor to American rum-runners would be perfectly legal and Sir Brodrick is offering a guaran-teed profit of 20 per cent or better to investors in his projected enter-

The professor was really very profound, and he wasn't such an elderly professor, either. His style was concise, and when he had vella coat, squirrel collar. Sizes finished with a subject but little remained to be said. The girls on the campus were discussing this with admiration. The scholarly ones had declaimed length when a little bobbed-haired beauty proceeded to butt in. "The professor tells me he now has a subject he can't say enough about," she said. "And what is the subject, girlie?" they inquired.

GHANG. vourtiel troubles

Dear Sir: What is likely to be the cause of hitting the hall back on the heef of the club, especially with the driver, which troubles me frequently?

Answer: In most cases trouble of this kind is due to letting the weight fall forward on the toes during the swing. Quite frequently this is caused by the player's standing with his knees too stiff. It is necessary to keep the weight well back on the heels at all times. And in order to do this. there ought to be a very slight bend in the knees.

Somebody has explained it as holding the body and knees so that they have a sense of springiness as though you were going to catch a rather heavy weight dropped from above. Whether this carries any definite idea to you or not, remember that you must keep the weight back on the heels. Also it may be that you are standing to ofar away from the ball, so far away that you have to reach forward to hit it, thus taking the balance too far forward. The cure for that, of course, is to stand closer to the ball. Generally speaking it is a fairly good rule to stand just far enough so that if the club, with the head in position, is lowered in line with the left leg, it will touch the when the latter is bent but slightly This rule is not infallible, however, because a tall player with long arms may use a short club in which this would not apply, whereas a short player might have a long-shafted club, in which case this standard would not hold About as good a rule as ony to

to tee the ball, and then take your chance, with the weight well back on the heel, so that you can place the club head immediately behind the ball without any appreciable reaching for it. (Copyright, 1923, by Bell Syn., Inc.)

Gessler, Defense Minister, Made Military Dictator to Offset Bavarian Situation

Because of the situation in Bavaria, the German cabinet decided upon an immediate proclamation of state of emergency throughout the republic and Minister of Defense Gessler was given executive authority to put into force any military or police measures he might deem warranted: This action, construed in Paris and London as virtually placing Germany in the hands of a military dictator, was taken when news of the appointment of Dr. Von Kahr as military dictator of Bavaria was received in Berlin, and the proclamation issued was intended as an offset to the Bavarian manifesto.

Act of the Legislature of the State of California, entitled "An Act to provide a system of street improvement bonds to represent certain assessments for the cost of street work and improvements within municipalities and also for the payment of such bonds," approved February 27, 1893, and of all Acts supplementary thereto and amendatory thereof.

Pursuant to Statute and to Resolution of Award of the Council of the City of Glendale, California, adopted the 11th day of October, 1923, directing this notice, notice is hereby given that the said Council, in open session, on the 4th day of October, 1923, opened, examined and publicly declared all sealed proposals offered for the following improvements, to-wit:

The improvement of portions of Fourth Street, Winchester Avenue, Justin Avenue, and of certain streets and alleys intersecting or terminating therewith in the City of Glendale, the City of Glendale,

as described in Resolution of Intention No. 2643, passed by said Council on the 6th day of August 1923, to which said Resolution reference is hereby made for a description of said work, and of the district to be assessed, therefor.

The Council of the City of Glendale determines that serial bonds shall be issued to represent assessments of twenty-five (825.00) dollars or over for the costs of said work or improvement; said serial bonds shall extend over a period ending nine (9) years from and, after the sepond day of January bext succeeding the date of said bonds, and an even annual proportion of the principal sum thereof shall be payable by coupon on the second day of January every year after their date until the whole is paid; and the interest shall be payable seemi-annually by coupon on the second days of January and July, resecutively, of each year at the rate of seven per cent per annum on all sums unpaid until the whole of said principal and interest is paid.

sums unpaid until the whole of said principal and interest is paid.
Said bonds shall be issued in accordance with the provisions of an Act of the Legislature of the State of California, entitled "An Act to provide a system of street improvement bonds to represent certain assessments for the cost of street work and improvements within municipalities."

Every child, big or small who wants to go to the great show free of charge, or who actually wants to take part in a real circus for kids, be sure and come down to the circus headquarters next to the Glendale Press on Brand and Lexington streets today and Mr. Law will tell you how you can have the most fun you ever had. The circus manager will be in his office every day both before and after school and will be glad to tell everyone all about the queer animals, the mysterious magicians, the strange freaks, the bird that lays square eggs and the funniest clowns that ever romped around the rings of any circus. And then he will tell you how you can see them all absolutely FREE.

Have you seen the only live south American Jungle-Cat in captivity. His name is Bob and he is on exhibition today at the circus headquarters. Frank Salmacia, of the Glendale Music company, who recently closed a 99-year lease for the lot on South Brand, now occupied by the Downing & Cox Nursery company, states that his company expects to have possesssion of the lot about the first of the year and will improve it with a two-story building, which will, when completed, be leased to other tenants. The Music company intends to remain where it is unless forced to move. It has secured this site as an anchor to windward to make sure of a location in the center of town from which it cannot be ousted. The lease was made with H. C. Baker, owner of the lot. The company owns a lot on Brand near Harvard, adjoining the property of Coker & Taylor, which it plans to sell before building on the leased
